Descripción general	Columbia World Projects is accepting applications for the Obama Foundation Scholars Program at Columbia University. We invite emerging leaders from the U.S. and around the world who have demonstrated a commitment to finding solutions to challenges in their communities and countries to apply to participate in an immersive, fully-funded, 9-month residential leadership development program in New York City. Over the course of an academic year at Columbia University in the City of New York, Scholars have the opportunity to deepen their skills and build new networks to accelerate the impact of their work. I hope that you will help spread the word by sharing this opportunity with rising leaders in your communities. The program is appropriate for individuals from a variety of educational backgrounds and an undergraduate or master's degree is not a prerequisite for consideration. At Columbia University, the Scholars will participate in a year-long, rigorous, immersive program that brings together academic, skills-based, and experiential learning, designed by Columbia University in consultation with the Obama Foundation. The program provides individuals who have a proven commitment to service and leadership with the tools they need to make their efforts more effective and give them the opportunity to apply their skills and knowledge to tackle real-world challenges. Scholars will also have the opportunity to build connections with a network of leading practitioners and rising global leaders, taking advantage of the unique opportunities for engagement that come with being in the City of New York.
