Descripción general	Prof. Gazela Pudar Draško, Director of the Institute for Philosophy and Social Theory (University of Belgrade), is looking for OSUN partners to collaborate on a study of resistance to hybrid regimes in the social sphere--see concept attached. Abstract: HYBRID.RESIST focuses on the duality of hybrid regimes, seeking to identify resistance strategies towards both political and societal hybridity. We claim that, besides political hybridity that is widely investigated and documented as form of electoral democracy with political authoritarianism, decisionism and the concentration of power in the hands of a few political actors, there is a second, societal hybridity that intersects with the first one – it combines authoritarianism exemplified by collectivism, strong polarization, reliance on charismatic leaders and cultural conservatism, with post-Fordist techniques of embedding the social change not to allow system change. These regimes stand for an avant-garde new form of regimes able to adjust and contaminate the central societies of global capitalism meant to be embedded democracies.
